G., George Jewell, brigade ordnance officer, and D. P. Stewart, brigade surgeon. And if Bragg had had fifty thousand like us and the ability to command, he could have marched to Cincinnati and remained there. From where we were on the line we could see the Lookout plainly. Just on the high point next to the river, we had a battery, and opposite it, and across the river on Mocasoon Point, the Federals had a fort. They fought an artillery duel nearly every day while we were here. The boys with mathematical turn of mind would figure on the distance from where we were to the top of the mountain by the time it required the sound to reach us after we could see the flash of the big guns. Don t remember the distance now, but...
